Introduction

Historical Sketch

The mission work of the Presbyterian Church in Canada is directed by the Board of World Mission (B.W.M.). Originally known as the General Board of Mission (G.B.M.), it became the B.W.M. in 1972 through an Act of the General Assembly. The B.W.M. is concerned with the initiation, development and maintenance of missions. The B.W.M. is divided between foreign and domestic mission work. The Home Missions section, officially known as Canada Operations is involved in the work of missions within the Canadian federal boundaries, and acts as a Committee of the B.W.M..

Canada Operations has a very broad and varied scope of responsibilities. Embodied within the responsibilities of Canada Operations is financial assistance for congregations suffering from funding weaknesses. This assistance takes many forms, such as stipend assistance, loans or grants for the construction, maintenance or expansion of church buildings and the co-ordination of special projects between stable and ailing congregations. An important portion of Canada Operations' work involves researching potential mission sites and the subsequent Church Extension, that is the creation of new congregations across Canada. Other facets of Canada Operations includes deaconess work, such as the missionary vans, the special ministering to Canada's native people, Inter-Church relations and ethnic work.

Mission work within Canada is synchronized with the synod and presbytery structure of the Church. Synod mission concerns are directed by the superintendent of missions for that particular synod. Meanwhile, each presbytery has a convener, who is responsible for the supervision of mission work in his or her presbytery. In both instances, the superintendent and convener operate in close association with their respective clerks. Overall supervision of Canada Operations is maintained at the Administrative Offices of the Presbyterian Church in Canada, which are located in Don Mills, Ontario.

The material in this collection covers a period from approximately 1950 to 1980, though the primary focus is restricted to the years between 1960 and 1980, and arrived at these archives in a number stages between 1968 and 1984.

Scope and Contents Note

In order to utilize this finding aid most efficiently, it is important to understand the two different manners in which the material of the collection was originally organized. This is particularly important, since these two styles have been reflected in this finding aid as much as was possible. Material was catalogued either by (1) geographic location as part of a specific congregation, presbytery, or synod; this type forms the first three portions or series of the finding aid, or material was filed according to (2) subject, in which case it was filed alphabetically from A to Z. This type forms the last portion of the finding aid.

(1) Geographical Access

The geographical files begin on the east coast and cross the country to the west coast, using the listings of synods and presbyteries from the Acts and Proceedings (1979) as the guide. In order to ensure unique file identification codes (F.I.C.s) for each file, a three character code was devised. Letters designate a particular series within the collection, Arabic numerals denote sections within a series and roman numerals specify individual files within a section.

Consequently, a file might be coded like this:

A-23-vii - Series "A"
 Section 23
 File number vii

or

B-12-xii - Series "B"
 Section 12
 File number xii

There are three different series.

- Series "A" - General mission files
- Series "B" - Church Extension
- Series "C" - Deaconess Work

Within each series there are a varying number of sections, using Arabic numerals as designators.

- Series "A" - Contains 53 sections
- Series "B" - Contains 49 sections
- Series "C" - Contains 3 sections

Within each section there are a varying number of files, using roman numerals as designators.

The years which bracket the material are provided for each file and appear following the file identification code (F.I.C.). Each file is titled with (1) the presbytery name and (2) the congregation name. The congregation is identified by the town name and the church name, eg. Sudbury, St. James (that "St. James" is a Presbyterian Church is considered understood).

Most often the type of material in each file is listed as "Correspondence and reports". The reports are most often annual reports, though not exclusively. The focus of the correspondence is identified if it concerns one particular subject, eg. finances grants. Other materials which are identified in the list of contents for a file include: orders of service (dedication services or opening services), newsclippings, and histories. All non-textual material, including photos, maps and blue prints have been removed from the collection and a notation in the file description has been made wherever such material has been removed.
