St. Columba Presbyterian Church

Last Updated: June 2025

Historical Sketch

St. Columba Presbyterian Church, Fairville, NB was established in 1895 when eight men met at the house of Mr. D. Taylor to establish a board of trustees, which was supervised by Rev. James Ross, Superintendent of Missions. On October 14 of that year Rev. J. Ross MacDonald became the first minister of what was known as Fairville Presbyterian Church. During the Rev. William McNeill's tenure (1908-1938), Fairville church had to deal with the question of Church Union. By a majority vote, the congregation declined in 1925 to become part of the United Church of Canada and remained Presbyterian. Shortly after 1938, the Fairville church was renamed in honour of St. Columba. In 1968, building had begun on a new church and Christian Education centre – at a more central location. The new church was dedicated in 1969. In 1998, St. Columba and St. Matthews were combined by the Presbytery of St. John to form a two-point pastoral charge. Two years later, this decision was reversed, and the two churches were served once again by their own ministers.

St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church

Last Updated: June 2025

Historical Sketch

St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Fergus completed its first church building in 1835, on land set aside from the Clergy Reserves. The church was largely paid for by the Hon. Adam Fergusson, a founder of the Village of Fergus. The congregation were members of the Presbyterian Church in connection with the Church of Scotland and St. Andrew's was part of the Presbytery of Hamilton. The first Minister was Rev. Alexander Gardiner who served from 1837 to 1842. In 1844, the Disruption of the Established Kirk of Scotland resulted in a split in the congregation. The Minister, Rev. George Smellie and a large part of the congregation, including all but one of the elders, left to form Melville Church, Fergus. After considerable controversy, it was agreed the church property would continue to be held by the remaining members of St. Andrew's and the Melville congregation worshipped there while their church was being built. As the size of the St. Andrew's congregation grew, it was decided that the Glebe, consisting of the land from the Clergy Reserves and another parcel of 171 acres granted in 1836 by the Government of Canada, should be sold and the funds used to build a larger church and manse. A new stone manse (in present use) was built in 1857, replacing the original of stucco-frame construction on the St. David Street property. The new limestone church of Gothic design was completed on the original site in 1862. An organ was purchased for use in the church in 1872. In 1925, the congregation of St. Andrew's voted to remain within the Presbyterian Church in Canada and at that time new members were received when Melville Presbyterian Church, Fergus joined the United Church.

Historical Sketch

St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church (Fort Coulonge, Quebec) was formed in 1856 and the congregation met at the home of the Bryson family. Fort Erie, Ontario

St. Andrew's-Knox Presbyterian Church

Last Updated: July 2025

Historical Sketch

The land for St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church in Fort Erie was given to the congregation in February 1873. The church was opened in the fall of that year as part of a joint charge with Ridgeway. Prior to 1875, the congregation was affiliated with the Presbyterian Church of the United States. Sometime after 1875, St. Andrew's separated from Ridgeway and in 1889 was linked with the newly formed congregation of Knox Church at International Bridge under Rev. John Young. In 1925, St. Andrew's Church Hall was built at the rear of the original building. The congregation voted to remain with the Presbyterian Church.

In 1889, the Presbyterian families in the town of International Bridge (later known as Bridgeburg) gathered for the purpose of organizing a church. Services were held in Oddfellows Hall until 1893 when construction on the new church building was completed. The congregation voted to remain with The Presbyterian Church in Canada in 1925.

In 1967, St. Andrew's amalgamated with Knox to form St. Andrew's-Knox Presbyterian Church.

Historical Sketch

The Presbyterian presence in Fort St. John began in 1919 when Alwin Holland, a teacher and surveyor, held worship services in his home after settling in the North Peace. Early ministry efforts were supported by student ministers and visiting clergy, including Ian Mackinnon in 1922 and Rev. Burch in 1932. A permanent church building was completed in 1937, followed by periods of closure and renewed activity, particularly under the leadership of Rev. John Carson and Rev. Stan Self in the 1940s and 1950s. In 1960, the congregation opened Kirk Hall, which became the main church facility when the original church building was sold in 1976. In 1983, The congregation voted to change the name of the church from Burch Presbyterian Church to Fort St. John Presbyterian Church.

Historical Sketch

St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Fredericton, N.B. was established as a result of the 1925 church union when majority of the congregation for St. Paul's P.C. went United while the minority declared their intent to remain Presbyterian. St. Andrew's began to hold services in temporary locations before the corner stone for the Church was laid on July 9, 1927, by the first minister, Rev. James Garrow Berry.
